The China University of Political Science and Law (CUPL) is a Project 211 university, a government honor bestowed upon China's finest institutions of higher education. CUPL is well known for legal academic and administrative training in law, history, philosophy, economics, management, and education. Under the supervision of the State Ministry of Education (MOE), CUPL is located in Beijing on two campuses: the Xueyan Campus in Haidian District and the Fule Campus in Changping District.

CUPL predecessor (The Peking College of Political Science and Law founded in 1952), combined departments of law, political science and sociology of Peking University, Yenching University, Fudan University, and Tsinghua University. In 1954, the college merged with Xueyan Campus, and later in 1983, merged with the Central Cadre College of Political Science, and subsequently renamed the China University of Political Science and Law. In 1985, the university established a new campus in Changping. Subsequently, three divisions emerged: an undergraduate school, a postgraduate school, and a school of advanced training.

Over the past 60 years, CUPL has educated and trained more than 200,000 graduates, and has played an active role in the legal education effort in China. CUPL has assumed a leadership role in China in the development and innovation of legal education and has played a key role in representing the country in international academic exchange.

Approximately 15,000 full-time students are currently enrolled in CUPL. Among the full-time students are almost 8,500 undergraduate students, approximately 6,000 graduate students, and over 500 international students. CUPL has 893 faculty members, including 252 full professors, 378 associate professors, 150 members of the doctoral program, and 547 members of the master's degree program. Nearly nine in ten of CUPL's full-time faculty members hold doctoral or master's degrees.

CUPL comprises 19 schools and departments and 10 interdisciplinary research institutes. CUPL currently offers 18 major undergraduate, 68 academic master degree programs, 3 professional master degree programs, 27 doctoral programs, and 2 post-doctoral research centers.

The university collaborates with 157 distinguished universities and institutions in 39 countries. Each year, hundreds of faculty and students travel abroad for international exchange and study. The China-EU School of Law (CESL), founded in 2008, is the most comprehensive Sino-EU joint program in the field of legal education and research and international justice.

CUPL continues to develop international reputation striving for excellence in innovation, multiple disciplines, openness, and international reach.

Established in 2007 by the China Scholarship Council (CSC), a non-profit institution entrusted by the Chinese Government to manage the State Scholarship Fund, the Postgraduate Scholarship Program aims to improve the training of creative and distinguished postgraduate students and enhance the development of China's higher education. CSC will sponsor each year postgraduate students and talented Chinese students for overseas study, providing doctoral degree or conducting academic cooperation under joint-sponsorship program a world-class university. A one of the most prestigious universities in China, China University of Political Science and Law plans to send over 50 postgraduate students each year under this program for overseas study. It is believed that this scholarship program will provide a precious opportunity for our university to expand and enhance academic and research cooperation with other universities around the world.
